DECEMBER COURT
CONVENED TODAY

The Session Will Not Be a Very Busy One, It Is Indicated.

ALVA WALTERS NAMED FOREMAN

Menallen Township Man Heads the Grand Jury, Which Will Consider Three Indictments in Divorce.

Special to The Courier.
UNIONTOWN, Dec. 4.—The December term of criminal court convened today at 10 o'clock. Judge Umbel delivered the charge to the Grand Jury, which appears on another page, after having appointed Alva Walters of Menallen township as foreman of that body. After hearing the charge, which was prefaced by the usual remarks, the Grand Jurors retired to consider the 33 indictments on today's list.

One case was taken up this morning in the large court room. It was that of Joseph Hinkle, prosecuted for desertion and non-support by his wife, Nannie Hinkle.

Three libels in divorce were filed this morning. Vincenzo Caputo found married life a blissful state for but a brief time. He was married to Mary Caputo on March 15, last, and lived at Juniata. Vincenzo now claims that his wife has been unfaithful. He is living at Perryopolis and she to Dunbar township.

Charles E. Lind wants a divorce from Theresa Lind on the grounds of adultery.

An affidavit of defense was filed today in the suit of A. D. Johnson and John C. Fulton against Jacob Decker for $500 rent. Davis claimed he expended $12.84 for repair to an elevator and lost $500 worth of business while the lift was out of commission. He thinks the plaintiffs owe him $73.84 instead of him owing them $500.

Indications Are That From Now on the Stores Will Be Crowded.
Christmas Decorations Prevail.

Many Christmas shoppers made their first appearance Saturday and from now on the merchants are prepared to do a big holiday business. From all indications it looks as if the early Christmas shopping movement will be successfully carried out. The different stores were crowded Saturday afternoon and up until late last night. The merchants expecting the Christmas shoppers to be out earlier than usual this year were prepared for the shoppers. Prettily decorated handkerchief booths had been arranged and an elaborate display of handkerchiefs were exhibited. The Christmas shoppers are expected to be out in large numbers. The Christmas shoppers were not only to be found in the dry goods stores but in jewelry stores and novelty stores as well. The merchants are prepared to do a big holiday business and in order to accommodate the Christmas buyers as heretofore extra help will be hired.

IMPLICATE COUNSEL IN THE BRIBERY SCANDAL

It Is Said Juror Lockwood Identified Lawyer As One Who Joined Defective Army Brigade.

United Press Telegram.
LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 4.—Following the statement of Mrs. Robert E. Bahr, wife of the first permanent juror in the McNamara case, that she received $500 of a promised $5,000 bribe if she would influence her husband to vote for acquittal, came the announcement from the District Attorney's office today that Frederick is withholding much evidence of the gravest importance.

It is said that George Lockwood, prospective juror, who worked in connection with the prosecution, resulting in the arrest of Bert Franklin, identified the picture of a leading McNamara attorney as the man who joined Franklin a few minutes after the money had been passed to Lockwood.

Persons close to the entire case say that the bribery mixer will be dropped. They declare it was part of the arrangement culminating when both the McNamara pleaded guilty, that this bribery matter should be dropped. Frederick says he knows all about the alleged bribery but that he is waiting for a second permanent juror to confess and turn the bribe money over before acting.

Mrs. Bahr said: "I will not say who it was; but it was not Franklin. Frederick has that information and it may come out at Franklin's trial." The Franklin trial was this morning continued for another week.

CONNELLVILLE ELKS
IN LODGE OF SORROW

Services Yesterday Were Brief But Impressive
at the Solisoon.

Robert Lee Head the Orator

Kiefer's Orchestra furnished the music while the Solists were J. B. Millard, Miss Annabelle Millard and E. D. Fuller.

The annual Lodge of Sorrow of the Connellville Lodge No. 503, B. P. O. E., was held yesterday afternoon in the Solisoon theatre in the presence of a representative assemblage of Elks, their families and friends. At 2 o'clock the members of the lodge met at the Elks lodge on East Main street and marched to the theatre where they occupied several rows of seats reserved in the orchestra. The services were the most impressive in years. In the past year three brother Elks were called away by the Grim Reaper. The stage decorations were very elaborate. J. L. Stader, having transformed the stage into a bower of beauty. An artistic arrangement of laurel formed a very fitting background for the beautiful floral decorations which consisted of immense baskets and white chrysanthemums. In the center of the laurel was a large mounted elk's head while depending from the ceiling were several large elk heads. As the name of each departed Elk was called a purple light was extinguished. The front of the stage was cleverly draped with purple and white bunting. The entire effect was very impressive.

An exceptionally fine program was rendered. The program was as follows: Chopin's funeral march, Kiefer's orchestra; opening ceremony, E. H. Harnening; vocal solo, J. B. Millard; piano accompanist, Miss Annabelle Millard; General Elogio, Robert Lee Head of Connellville; solo, solo, solo, Prof. E. D. Fuller, Uniontown; contraalto solo, "Jerusalem," Miss Annabelle Millard; closing ceremonies, solo, solo, solo, Kiefer's orchestra.

The departed brothers of the lodge were W. A. Davidson, J. Emmett Stillwagon, Harry S. Stout, M. K. Smith, James Edward, Charles L. Clark, W. H. Anderson, E. P. Ward, A. J. Smith, H. F. Jones, S. R. Mason, Quinton Marlette, W. H. Brown, C. W. Thompson, Charles H. Reed, Jr., George H. Sawyer, George M. Craft, Q. L. Egan, Andrew Haas, Clair Stillwagon, A. J. Cunningham, B. H. Newcomer and D. F. Girard.

SIXTY-THIRD CONGRESS CONVENED TODAY AT NOON; SPEAKER CLARK AND
VICE PRESIDENT SHERMAN WIELD GAVELS

United Press Telegram.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—With the thump of an ivory handled gavel in the good right hand of Speaker Champ Clark and the polite tapping of his desk by Vice President Sherman, the first session of the 63rd Congress opened today in business at precisely 12 o'clock today.

Galleries were, as usual, filled to the limit with spectators. Penitent relatives of the members and lights of society made a resplendent display of the latest in winter fashions, gay gowns provided especially for this occasion and for society functions to follow.

On the floors of the Senate and House, members were busy shaking hands with one another and congratulating their friends and other survivors of the torrid special session of last summer.

In striking contrast to the reunion of a year ago there was an absence of gloom. Then, it was, that about 125 members of the Senate and House came from the November battles, wherein they were shot from their perches in the halls of fame. Today they were in aerial spirits, beaming and cheerful. Later scores of them will prance through the stately halls of the Capitol with wrinkled brows and nerves on edge as they look forward to the elections of next year. Records made during the session will be made or lost the ambitions of all the members of the House and of 31 Senators who will be returned or dropped out by the sovereign citizen when he goes to the polls next November.

On the dot of 12 o'clock, Vice President Sherman, who had already presided, entered at a door beside the elevated chair and desk at his official station and a moment later, tapped for order. Senators arose for prayer, and the first rider on the program, by the Chaplain of the Senate, Rev. Elyseus G. B. Pierce, pastor of the church of which President Taft is a member.

View President Sherman circled the Secretary to call the roll. At the close a number of members arose to explain the absence of missing colleagues. Sherman announced that a quorum was present.

Then came the business of appointing two Senators, to act with a committee of the House, of informing President Taft that a quorum of both Houses was assembled and that "Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make." The Secretary was directed to notify the Senate that a quorum of the Senate had assembled and was ready for business.

CRIMINAL COURT CONVENES
IN SOMERSET CO. TODAY
Judge Koser Appoints Valentine Miller of Stoyestown Foreman of the Grand Jury.

FLETCHER WITHERS' HEAD
STOPPED A BRICKBAT

The Police Found Him Late Saturday Night and Physically Was Called to His Him Up.

Fletcher Withers, colored, was found Saturday night at 11:30 o'clock in Meadow alley by Officers James Francis and William Stoner. Fletcher said someone hurled a brick at him. He had an ugly cut on the right cheek and the wound was bleeding profusely when the man was found. He was taken to the police station and Dr. S. G. McGowan was summoned and looked after the man's injury. During the night he removed the bandage from the wound and when he appeared before Burgess J. L. Evans yesterday morning he was a pitiful looking sight. His face was covered with blood and his eyes were almost closed. He had to be assisted to the room of the Burgess. He was discharged.

George Williams, colored, was in the police station for the first time. He was arrested Saturday night in Meadow Lane by Officer William Stoner on a charge of drunkenness. It being his first appearance in the police station he was given his release by the Burgess.

Daniel Nolan, aged 50 years, and Mike McGowan were arrested Saturday night about 10:30 o'clock by Officer M. J. Ruhl. Nolan left a forfeit of $3.50. He was charged with drunkenness. McGowan was charged with being drunk and disorderly. He was given 72 hours.

Joe Kosarash was charged with train riding. The arrest was made by Special B. & O. Officer Thomas Phelan. He was given 48 hours.

BANQUET PLANS OF COMMERCE CHAMBER

Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary Will Furnish the Turkey
Menu.

B. & O. OFFICIALS THE GUESTS

Expected There Will Be a Large Turnout to Show Visitors Connellville's Appreciation of the Big Railroad System Touching Here.

This morning the Chamber of Commerce made arrangements to have the banquet to be given on the evening of December 8 for the visiting Baltimore & Ohio railroad officials served by the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. This organization is composed of women from all the churches. They served the successful dinner that was given last year in honor of the Western Maryland officials and expect to do even better this time. The menu consists of turkey, oysters in various styles and the usual trimmings.

It is believed the banquet will be largely attended. Announcement was made today that there would be no subscription or solicitation for funds at the banquet, which is not being held for that purpose. The idea of the dinner is to show to the visiting officials of the Baltimore & Ohio that Connellville's business and professional men hold the railroad in high esteem. The speakers will endeavor to further content the friendship which exists towards the railroad, which has paid into Connellville hundreds of thousands of dollars in wages and improvements.

It is expected that President Daniel Willard and General Manager A. W. Thompson will be in attendance, beside the other lesser officials in whose honor the affair is given.

It will be remembered that the Western Maryland officials were greeted by a cordial reception on the part of Connellville and it is hoped to show the same courtesy to those of the Baltimore & Ohio.

OUST UNSAFE LABOR MEN
ARGUES BOMB PROSECUTOR

District Attorney Miller of Indianapolis Puts Samuel Gompers in That Category, Too.

United Press Telegram.
INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 4.—Asserting that the government's investigation into the dynamiting plots resulting in the conviction of the McNamara brothers has uncovered "the most damnable conspiracy ever entered into in this country," and that the time has arrived when "such unsafe leaders as Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor must be retired," United States District Attorney Charles W. Miller today gave for the first time an extended statement in regards to the Federal probe.

"The people are entitled to know all the facts, and will know them at the proper time," declared Miller. "The destruction of life and property must cease. Now is the time for Frank P. Duffy of the Carpenters and Joiners Union and other leaders who stand for honest government to come to the front."

ASSUME OFFICE IN BORO AND TOWNSHIP

Justices of the Peace and Constables Take Their Places Today.

S. CONNELLVILLE A BOROUGH

Socialist Council and School Board Will Organize There, Likewise Two Squires of That Faith—Squire Clark
Out of a Job.

The newly elected borough and township officers assume office today under the amended Constitutional provisions. At South Connellville the Socialists will have their first opportunity in Fayette county to show whether they are capable of giving efficient municipal government. The Council and School Board of the new borough are both controlled by Socialist members, while both Justices of the Peace and Constables are also of that faith. The experiment at South Connellville will be watched with considerable interest.

In Connellville the only officers affected are one Justice of the Peace and several Constables. For the second time since he became a Justice of the Peace, Squire William P. Clark is out of that job. The Governor will appoint his successor and no announcement has been made as to who the lucky party is. Squire Clark circulated a petition for reappointment which has been forwarded to Harrisburg.

Three new Constables will don their stars today for the first time. They are George Gregg, in the Third ward, who succeeds the veteran Charles Wilson; J. W. Edwards, in the Fourth; and Joseph O'Brien, who succeeds William Shrum. The other four constables were re-elected. They were J. W. Mitchell, in the First; Harold Rolden, in the Second; E. E. Stillwagon, in the Fifth; and R. A. Smith in the Sixth.

The passing of Wilson and Joseph T. Crossland, the Bulskin township officer of the Fourth ward, marks a termination of long service. Wilson is still the Humane Agent and will probably be kept busy at that for sometime to come. Throughout the county new boards of School Directors, Councils and Supervisors and other officers will assume their positions today. Every School Board in the county was affected by the new School Code.

NO GROUNDS FOR BELIEVING
UNIONS BACK OF VIOLENCE

When Specific Charges are Brought
Will Be the Time for Probe
Into Organized Labor.

United Press Telegram.
NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor declared today that the suspicious expressed in certain quarters that various unions have given sanction to dynamiting are unfounded.

"When specific charges are made it will be our duty to counsel them. There has been a lot of vaporizing and timing about these suspicions, but nothing definite has developed. I make the suspicion expressed in certain quarters that various unions have given sanction to dynamiting are unfounded. Of all the hundreds of dynamiting cases in this country not one has ever been proven to have sprung from union councils."

SCHOOL DIRECTORS PARADE
TO PITTSBURG AGAIN TODAY

But There Is Possibility of Another Delay in Starting Trip Which May Make Futile.

The Connellville School Directors, or most of them, paraded to Pittsburgh again today, hoping the suit against them by Miss Emma Brady would be reached in Federal court. This is the second trip they have made on this account and the end is not in sight. It will be necessary for them to return tonight and close up the business of the year.

It was stated today that the case may not be reached today in Federal court, and if it isn't, there will be some disappointed Directors. They are getting peevish over the repeated trips that are required, for it is something of a drain on them, just before Christmas.

JUDGE R. E. UMBEL CHARGES GRAND JURY

Advises Constables as to Duties as Fish, Game and Fire Wardens.

TELLS OF THE JUVENILE COURT

Shows Work Being Done by the Probation Officer for Youngsters Who Have Been Bailed from the Court. Money Needed for Children.

Judge Umbel today delivered the charge to the Grand Jury when the December Criminal Court convened.

He said: We wish to call the attention of our Constables to a matter that embraces one of their duties of much greater importance than they or the public generally appear to consider it.

We have in the State Board of Game Commissioners composed of seven able, earnest men, who without reward or compensation from the State—not even receiving their expenses, give of their time and money to the discharge of their duties in protecting our forest and timber lands and certain wild game and birds of the Commonwealth.

And we bring this matter to your attention at the instance and request of Dr. Joseph Kalbfus, Secretary of this Commission.

Our observation is that far too few of our people give any consideration to the very great importance of protecting our wild birds.

Our Game Commission has given this subject much attention and careful study and the importance of the information submitted as a result cannot be overestimated.

By the Act of March 22, 1899, it was enacted by our Legislature that all Constables are ex-officio Fire, Game and Fish Wardens with concurrent jurisdiction throughout the entire county.

It is their duty to enforce and close calculation, this feature of our Court of Quarter Sessions and Juvenile Court is saving to the tax payers of the county at least $1,000 per year over and above the salary and expenses of the Probation and Probation Officer and it is more likely to increase than diminish in the future.

We ask you to examine and consider these reports, and any suggestions or recommendations that you may have to make regarding the same or any other matter bearing on this work will receive our careful and earnest consideration.

This movement has our approval and we feel disposed to give it more attention in the future than we have in the past.

In 1903 there was an Act passed by our Legislature defining the power of Court with reference to the care treatment and control of dependent, neglected, incorrigible and delinquent children.

Under this Act the Probation Officer is appointed a Probation Officer; in 1909 it was amended, and also in 1902 a law was enacted authorizing the several Courts of Quarter Sessions to suspend sentence and place defendants on parole under the supervision of a Probation Officer or such other person as the Court might deem right and proper.

In view of these Acts of Assembly we appointed a Probation Officer and now have for years a Probation Officer in this town.

Through the work and efforts of our Probation Officer quite a number of the children have been placed in good comfortable homes and are occasionally visited by him and report in instances that they are doing well, contented and happy.

Owing to our not having a proper children's home it has been necessary for us to commit a few of those that have been brought into our Juvenile Court to Morganau Reform School.

We have extended this power as sparingly as possible and hope for the time when we can take care of the dependent, neglected and incorrigible children of the county without committing any of them to Morganau or any other institution outside the limits of Fayette County.

It is our earnest desire so far as possible to find and secure for these unfortunate children homes where they will be taught and required to work and surrounded with right and proper home influences.

Our observation convinces us that in most instances these children are not degenerate nor are they at heart naturally bad, they are in the true sense only neglected and in the majority of cases with proper training and treatment will make reliable, useful men and women.

Every vestige of our power and authority is at the command of the people in this matter and we have never failed to give attention to every case that has been brought to our notice and we ask you to do the same and through you we ask our whole people to take care of their neighbors and ask each other to do likewise.

PLAN FINE PROGRAM FOR THE DUE SOCIAL

Scottdale Union Will Hold Annual Event at Mrs. Robert Skemp's.

POULTRY SHOW OPENS TUESDAY

Big List of Entries For the Second Exhibit of the Chicken Fanciers' School will close at 5 o'clock Saturday—Other Notes of News.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, Dec. 4.—An interesting and pleasing program has been prepared by the Women's Christian Temperance Union for the annual Due Social which will be given at the home of Mrs. Robert Skemp tomorrow evening. There will be a piano solo by Miss Rose Hutchinson, a solo by Miss Sara Margaret Trump, a reading by Mrs. H. H. Atwood, followed by a quartet composed of Mrs. George Francis Kelly, Miss Thelma Dick, Mrs. J. H. Reynolds, Misses Margaret and Miss Mae Gordon. The program will close with a piano solo by Miss Gertrude Field. The surplus of the Thanksgiving Day collection amounting to $23.10 has been turned over to the W. C. T. U. and will be used in the town's charitable work which the union takes up each winter in behalf of the deserving poor of this locality.

First Henry Show.
Winter arrived in truth yesterday so far as snow was concerned with a fall of between three and four inches of the beautiful, that drifted down from about noon until late in the afternoon. The sidewalk became slippery from the melting snow, but late in the evening the snow froze and made the walking rough but dry. The country roads are in good condition and several sleighs ventured out last night.

Is in Akron.
Clarence W. Macbeth, formerly a partner in the grocery store of Macbeth & Taylor, who disposed of his interest in the Taylor brothers, is now located with a new store and doing nicely in Akron, O.

Farmers to Meet.
The farmers who are interested in the proposed institute to be held here this winter will meet at the Krumer House this evening at 7:30 and discuss the plans for the event. A great deal of interest is being manifested in the institute and it will be one of the finest meetings without a doubt ever held in this community.

Club Organized.
Miss Irene Powers, musical instructor in the East Huntington township schools, has organized a club of 35 members, which will make its first public appearance in the form of a concert at the club house on Saturday, when the club will sing for the joint institute to be held at the Patterson Business college.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the United Brethren church will hold a birthday social at their church on Thursday evening, December 17.

Drew a Big Crowd.
The First United Brethren church was crowded yesterday afternoon by an interesting audience to hear Captain Richmond Ferguson, former Congressman from Alabama, who spoke on "The Great Destroyer." The lecture was a temperance one, delivered with all the strength and personality of this gifted southern orator. Captain Ferguson was brought here by Team 11, of the Y. M. C. A. Building Campaign committee, a silver offering was taken, all above expenses to go to the Building fund by the Team 11.

Chicken Show Tomorrow.
The second annual exhibition at the Scottdale Poultry and Pet Stock Association will open tomorrow and there is a terrific cackling and crowing about Market street today. The birds are being placed in the grand story of the Newcomer livery barn, an excellent place for such a show. The entries this year are said to surpass those of last year, when one of the best shows anywhere was held in Scottdale. The association owns its own coops, and added quite a number of new ones this season.

Owensdale.

OWENSDALE, Dec. 2.—Henry Ottensberg has moved from Meadow Hill to Scottdale.

John Hittner and Mitchell King were attending to matters of business at Scottdale last evening.

A large number from here and Morgan Station attended the "Confession" at the Solon Theatre, Connelville, Thursday afternoon and evening.

Miss Olive Butterworth is among those on the sick list.

Mrs. Herman Shulzback, Sr., and daughters, Misses Elizabeth and Jean, were visiting relatives here on Thursday.

Freight traffic over the Summit transfer and the Jit. Pleasant branch is more brisk than it has been for some months.

Two new upright boilers are being installed in the boiler house of the Old Meadow mills and an extremely heavy fly wheel will replace the old one. The new fly wheel will be somewhat larger than the huge engine which pulls all the mills in the plant. Many minor improvements are being made around the plant. It is reported that the work is being pushed as fast as possible and operations will resume immediately after the repairing is finished.

Earnest Krouse was attending to matters of business at Connelville yesterday.

Jane, the little daughter of Superintendent and Mrs. John Shields, who, attended by her mother is at the St.

Louis Sanatorium, St. Louis, recuperating from infantile paralysis, is improving nicely and it is expected that she will be able to go home soon. William Rankin was attending to matters of business at Scottdale yesterday.

A prettily arranged surprise party was tendered Mrs. William T. Martin, Jr., at her home on Thursday evening, by a number of her friends. During games of various descriptions were indulged in and at 10:30 o'clock a sumptuous repast was served. At Thompson's Barroom, departed for their respective homes wishing their hostess many happy returns of the day.

A family gathering of the immediate relatives of Abram Newcomer was held at the Newcomer homestead, near here, Thursday evening. There were over a score present and all did justice to the sumptuous turkey and chicken dinner with all its accompaniments such as only can be found in a rural home.

EVERYONE NEEDS IT

Graham & Co., of Connelville, and S. A. Lowe & Co., of Scottdale, are having a Wonderful Sale of Thompson's Barroom, the Mighty Kidney and Liver Specific.

And no wonder, when they offer to refund your money if it doesn't cure any disease of the kidneys, liver or bladder, backache, rheumatism, nervousness or any weakness of the kidneys. But Thompson's Barroom has cured so many almost intractable cases that Graham & Co., of Connelville, and S. A. Lowe & Co., of Scottdale, are pretty certain not to have any returns, there are a few instances.

Frank K. Sturges, Sturtevant, Crawford county, Pa., was cured of Bright's disease six years ago and only took six bottles. He has had no bad symptoms since.

"I had kidney trouble and enlargement of the liver and spleen," I took Thompson's Barroom. The first bottle reduced the measurement around my stomach from 45 to 38 inches, and several bottles completely cured me."

M. S. Laneworth, Tyroneville, Pa. After suffering the terrible agony of rheumatism for ten years, being compelled to use crutches, J. N. Dunn, Troy Center, Pa., after all hope had left him, and he had no faith in any remedy, took six bottles of Thompson's Barroom, threw away his crutches and went to work for the first time in ten years.

These statements are absolutely true, and the Thompson Medical Co., Connelville, Pa., will prove it. Thompson's Barroom is not affected by Thompson's Barroom, 60 cents and $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Rockwood.

ROCKWOOD, Dec. 3.—Prof. F. G. Martens of Pittsburgh, Pa., is visiting here. He and Mrs. C. B. Martens for several days this week.

Mrs. Levi Wolf and family have returned home from Dubois, where they spent Thanksgiving week with Mrs. Wolf's brother, P. M. Miller.

Mrs. A. G. Will of Market street, is ill at her residence suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia. This is the second attack and it is not likely that she will recover.

Mrs. Minnie Turner has returned home from Johnstown, after spending several weeks visiting friends and relatives in the city.

The Central Savings Bank Company has resumed operations, after a hiatus of several weeks due to a break down in their machinery.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Maxwell of Sand Butch, are guests for several weeks of the ladies' parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Miller of Main street.

Stauffer.

STAUFFER, Dec. 1.—Constable James Ellis of Mt. Pleasant, transferred business here Saturday.

A. J. K. Ketter is in Uniontown on Friday on professional business.

A. N. Crawford is seriously ill at his home on Church street having caught cold along with his advanced age. His recovery is doubtful.

John Burkholder of Carpentersville, called on friends here Saturday evening.

A trio consisting of William Querc, James Lopus and Ivy Solinsky attended a literary society at the Mt. Pleasant hotel on Saturday evening.

Mr. H. B. Beckman, who has been a sufferer from rheumatism for the past two weeks, is slowly recovering.

John W. Weller is having a two story addition built to his house on the corner of Church and Spring streets. His report was well represented at Uniontown today attending court.

The Origin of Feasting. As is the case with all very ancient practices, the origin of feasting is obscure. Herbert Spencer gives us to understand that the custom arose out of the habit of providing refreshments for the dead. The offerings to the dead were often made in a lavish manner as to involve the survivors in temporary starvation, and it is suggested by Spencer that the feasting which was at first the natural and inevitable result of the sacrifice on behalf of the dead, may eventually have come to be regarded as an indispensable concomitant of all sacred and worship as to have survived as a well established usage long after the original cause had ceased to operate.

Not Full Grief. "Gladys is very strict in her ideas about the appropriate touch in dress." "It's all right."

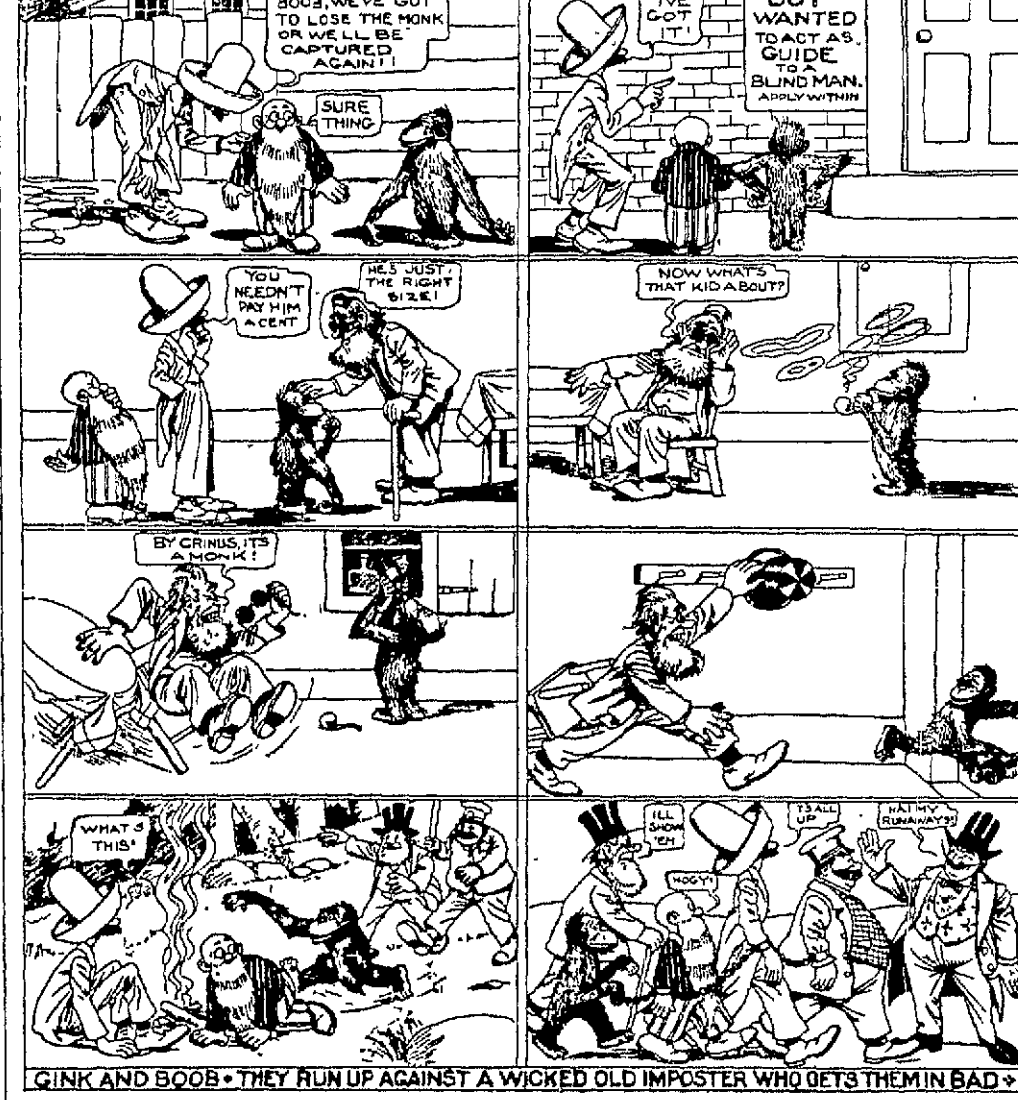

"So much so that when her half sister died she would not wear any but half mourning."—Baltimore American.

NATURE'S LAUNDRY.

It is liable to Play Pranks With the Wash in Yellowstone Park.

Nature's gifts are widely and variously distributed. In one place the elements of things are given, to be made available by labor; elsewhere she provides things ready for man's use. To gain our bread the seed must be first sown and months afterward the grain harvested, threshed and ground. But the nature of the Pacific does not pick its bread from the breadfruit tree. Perhaps nature foresaw the overworked and not overtook housewife to whom "washing day" is a dread and burden when she established here and there natural wash tubs and washing machines and in some places even provided ready-made soap.

In the Yellowstone National park the family washing is easily disposed of. The soiled bedding and clothing are put into a stout bag, which is hung in one of the boiling springs and left there while the party wanders about sightseeing. When taken out the clothes are so clean and white that no rinsing is necessary.

On one occasion a party hung their bag of clothes in the basin of the geyser called "Old Giant" and, wandering off, were absent longer than they intended to be. While they were away the "Giant" spotted, and the garments were thrown high in the air, torn into shreds and scattered—Exchange.

CHINESE TREASURES.

"Rubbing" on Paper From Ancient Tablets and Monuments

Chinese men of letters are exceedingly fond of ancient records in the shape of long scrolls of paper "rubbing" from famous stone tablets and monuments. The Lin Li Chang stationers of Peking are extensive traders in these. They send special agents on long trips to shrines or arrange with the local people at the place of a noted monument to take paper rubbings from it. "The usual rubbing is a field of black where the face has been inscribed, the lettering cut into the marble remaining white on the paper rubbing."

To the foreigner in China rubbings from the tablets the one left by the Newtordian Christians at Shanta, in Shensi, about 600 A. D., and the Mohammedan tablet are especially interesting.

Those from the tablets at the temple of Confucius at his burial place, Chetoo, in Shantung, are among the collections of the Chinese men of education. So many rubbings have been taken from several of the tablets which bear line portraits of Confucius that the lines and the letters on the stone have become so faint that the government has prohibited further rubbings being taken.—New York Sun.

A Policeman's Duty. Some of the answers given by candidates for the Chicago police force at a recent examination were:

"The duties of a policeman are to guard the peace and limb of the city." "If I found a man on my best surface with a gun, I would ask him his name, address, age, occupation, married or single, and would then see if he would rather go home or to a hospital."

"Burglary is a crime where you crawl in a man's house with the intention of stealing."—Chicago Tribune.

Despair and Despondency. No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangement of the delicate and important organs that are so distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the female organism.

Man More Liquid Than Solid.

Every fiber and every cell that enters into the formation of a living body is bathed in moisture, by which means alone these ultimate elements are kept alive and are enabled to carry out their duties. Even the bones, which appear to be the most solid of all, owe more than half their weight to the presence of fluid. That our bodies contain a large amount of fluid is proved in a striking manner by the blisters which rise after the infliction of a burn. Water, then, plays a very important part in the human anatomy, for it is through its agency that the vital processes of digestion, absorption and the excretion of waste products are carried out. To reduce the whole matter to figures and taking 154 pounds to be the total weight of an average full grown man, it is said that water alone accounts for 100 pounds of the whole.

Tortoise Shell.

The finest of tortoise shell is said to be that which comes from the Indian archipelago, although much of that obtained on the Florida coast is of the very best quality, says the Scientific American. There are three covers of plates on the back of the animal called "plastrs" by the fishermen. In the central row are five plates and in each of the others four plates, the latter containing the best material. Besides these, there are twenty-five small plates around the edges of the shell, known as "feet" or "noes." The biggest turtle does not furnish more than sixteen pounds of shell. Formerly the undershell was discarded as worthless, but now it is much esteemed for its delicacy of coloring. Sometimes imitation of tortoise shell is made of the horns of cows.

No Prop. A noted sociologist tells the following story of a woman in a manufacturing town. Approaching her for statistics, he asked, "Madam, have you any children?"

"No," she replied. "I have to work in the factory myself"—Life.

The Girl from His Town

"Don't give any orders in my motor, Mr. Blair. You sit still where you are."

"Do you think that I am such a simple youth that I—"

Letty Lane, with a gesture of supreme ennui said to him impatiently: "Oh, I just think I am pretty nearly tired to death; don't bother me. I want my own way."

Her voice and her gesture, her beauty and her indifference, her sort of vague lack of interest in him and in everything, but the boy, full of life as he was, out of ease, but he ventured, after a second:

"Won't you please tell me what you wanted me to do this afternoon?"

"Why, I was hard up, that's all. I have used all my salary for two months and I couldn't pay my bill at the Savoy."

"Lord!" he said fervently, "why didn't you—"

"I did. Like a fool I sent for you to do that thing, but I was awfully glad when you didn't come. You didn't turn up. Please don't bother or speak of it again."

And burning with curiosity as to what part Poniatowsky played in her life, Dan sat quiet, not venturing to put to her any more questions. She seemed so tired and so overcome by her own thoughts. When they had turned down toward the hotel, however, he decided that he must in honor tell her his news.

"Got some news to tell you," he exclaimed abruptly. "Want you to congratulate me? I'm engaged to be married to the Duchess of Breakwater. She happens to be a great admirer of your voice."

The actress turned sharply to him and in the dark he could see her little, white face. The covering over her head fell back and she exclaimed: "Heaven! you didn't tell me that!"

"Yes," he nodded, surprisedly. "What do you look like that for?"

Letty Lane arranged her scarf and then drew back from him and laughed.

"Oh, dear, dear, dear," she exclaimed, "and I'm engaged to be married!"

She looked up at him swiftly as though she feared she might detect some new quality in him which she had not observed before, but she saw only his clear, kind eyes, his charming smile and his beautiful, young ignorance, and said softly to him:

"No use to cry, little boy, it's true! But that woman isn't half good enough for you—not half, and I guess you think it funny enough to hear me say so! What does the other boy from Montana say?"

"Don't know," Dan answered indifferently. "Sarcastic him; didn't tell him about it before he left. You see he doesn't understand England—doesn't like it."

A little dazed by the way each of the two women had mentioned the other, he asked timidly:

"You don't like the Duchess of Breakwater, then?"

And she laughed again.

"Goodness gracious, I don't know her; actresses don't sit around with duchesses," she said, with a beautiful eyes, under their dark lashes, full on him, she asked:

"Do you like her?"

"You bet!" he said ardently. "Of course I do. I am crazy about her. Yet he realized, as he replied, that he didn't have any foundation to begin to talk about his fiancée."

They had reached the Carlton and the door of Letty Lane's motor was held open.

"Better get out," he urged, "and have something to eat."

And she, leaning a little way toward him, laughed.

"Crazy! Your engagement will be broken off tomorrow!" And she further said: "If I really thought it would, why I'd come like a shot."

As she leaned forward, her cloak slipping from her back, revealing her throat above the dark collar of the simple dress she wore, he looked in her dove-gray eyes, and murmured:

"Oh, say, do come along and risk it. I'm game, all right."

She hesitated, then bade him good night languidly, slipping back into her old attitude of indifference.

"I am going home to rest. Good night. I don't think the duchess would let you go, no matter what you did!"

Dan, standing there at her motor door, this beautiful, well-known woman, bawling him, leaning toward him, was conscious of her alone, all snowy and small and divine in her enveloping scarf, lost in the corner of her big car.

"I hate to have you go back alone to the Savoy. I really do. Please let me—"

But she shook her head. "Tell the man the Savoy," and as Dan, carrying out her instructions, closed the door, she said: "I don't like that empty vase in there. Would you be very good and put some flowers in it if they came?"

She wouldn't promise, and he went on:

"Will you put only my flowers in it?"

that vase always heron?"

"Then, why, of course not, goose," she said shortly. "Will you please let me close the door and go home?"

Dan walked into the Carlton when her bright motor had slipped away, his evening coat long and black flying in his hands behind him, his hat on the back of his blind head, light of foot and step, a gay young figure among the late lingering crowd.

He went to his apartments, and missed Ruggles in the lonely quiet of the sitting room but as the night before Ruggles had done, Dan in his bed room window stood looking out at the mist and fog through which before his eyes the things he had lately seen passed and repassed, spectral-like, winglike across the gloom. Finally, in spite of the fact that he was an engaged man with the responsibilities of marriage before him, he could think of but one thing to take with him when he finally turned to sleep.

The face of the woman he was engaged to marry eluded him, but the face under the white hood of Letty Lane was in his dreams, and in his troubled visions he saw her shining, dove-like eyes.

CHAPTER XIV.

From India's Coral Strands.

Mrs. Higgins, in Miss Lane's apartment at the Savoy, was adjusting the photographs and arranging the flowers when she was surprised by a caller who came up without the formality of sending his name.

"Do you think," Blair asked her, "that Miss Lane would see me half a minute? I called yesterday, and the day before, as soon as I saw that there was a substitute singing in Mandalay. Tell her I'm as full of news as a charity report, please, and I rather guess that will fetch her."

Something fetched her, for in a few minutes she came laughing in, and by the way who smiled at her visitor it might be thought Dan Blair's name alone had brought her in. The actress had been ill for a fortnight with what the press potboilers said was influenza. She wore a tea gown, long and white as foam, and her hair was in a soft knot and her face was pale as death. Frail and small as she was, she was more ethereal than when in perfect health.

"Don't stand a minute!" And by the hand she gave him Dan led her over to the lounge where the pillows were piled and a furnished silk cover thrown across the sofa.

"Don't give me that heavy rag, there's that little white shawl!" She pointed to it, and Dan, as he gave it to her, recognized the shawl in which she wrapped herself when she crossed the icy wings.

"It's in those infernal side scenes you get colds."

He sat down by her. She began to cough violently and he asked, troubled, "Who's taking care of you, anyway?"

"Higgins and a couple of doctors."

"That's all?"

"Yes, why, who should be?"

Dan didn't follow up his jealous suspicion, but asked in a tone almost paternal and softly confidential:

"How are your finances getting on?"

Her lips curved in a friendly smile. But she made a dismissing gesture with her frail little hand.

"Oh, I'm all right; Higgins told me you had some news about my poor people."

The fact that she did not take up the financial subject made him unpleasantly sure that her wants had been supplied.

"Got a whole bunch of news," Dan replied cheerfully. "I want to see the old man and the girl in their dignities. Gosh, you couldn't believe such things were true."

She drew her fine brows together. "I guess there are a good many things that would surprise you. But you don't need to tell me about hard times."

"I never sing out of the theater!" Her profile was to him and she looked steadily across the room. "It's a perfect fight to get the manager to consent."

Blair interrupted and said: "Oh, I'll see him, I'll make it all right."

"Please don't," she said bravely. "It's purely a business affair. How much will she pay?"

Dan was rather shocked. "Anything you like."

And he had humor faded at his tone, and she smiled at him. "Well, I'll tell Ronch that. I guess I'll make my singing a sure thing."

She changed her position and drew a long sigh as though she were very tired, leaned her blond head with its soft disorder back on the pillow, put both her faded hands under her cheek and turned her face toward Dan. The most delicate coral-like color began to mount her cheeks, and her gray eyes regained their light.

"Now please do tell me about the Poor People."

"That's the way I am. I'll do anything, give anything, so long as I don't have to hear hard stories!" She turned to him confidentially. "Perhaps it's not true, but I can't bear to hear about tales of woe."

What she said somewhat disturbed his idea of his high-spirited charity. "I don't believe you're lazy or selfish," he said sincerely, "but I've got an idea that not many people really know you."

This amused her. Looking at him quizzically, she laughed. "I expect you think you do," she said. "Well, I guess the people that see you when you are a kid, who come from your own part of the country, have a sort of friendship." And the girl on the sofa from the depths of her shawl put out a thin little hand to him and said in a voice as softly in tone as when she sang in Mandalay:

"Well, I guess that's right! I guess that's about true."

After the touch of a second, in which she thought best to take her little cold hand away from those big warm ones, she asked:

"Now please do tell me about the Poor People."

In this way giving him to understand how really true his better idea of her had been.

"Why, the old duffer is as happy as a house afire," said the boy. "Not to boast, I've done the whole thing up as well as I know how. I've got him into that health resort you spoke of, and the girl seems to have got a regular education free! She wants to study something, so she's going to school."

"Go on talking!" the actress invited languidly. "I love to hear you talk. Mountain! Don't change your trousers for this beastly English drawl, what ever you do."

"You have, though Miss Lane. I don't hear a thing of Blair from the way you speak."

And the girl said passionately: "I wish to God I spoke it right through it! I wish I had never changed my speech or anything in him that was like home."

And the boy leaning forward as eagerly exclaimed: "Oh, do you mean that? Think how crazy London is about you! Why, if you ever go back to Montana they will carry you from the cars in a triumphal chair through the town!"

She waited until she could control the emotion in her voice.

"Go on telling me about the little girl."

"She was so trusting as to give the money up to me and I guess it will draw interest for her all right."

"Thank you," smiled the actress. "You are terribly sweet. The child got Higgins to let her into my dressing, and she's been there ever since. I haven't time to see anybody except then."

Here Higgins made her appearance in the room, with an egg for her lady, which after much coaxing, Dan succeeded in getting the actress to eat. Higgins also had taken away the flowers, and Letty Lane said to Dan:

"I send them to the hospital; they make me sick." And Dan timidly asked:

"You're not?"

"This brought a flush across the ivory pallor of her cheek. "No, no, Higgins keeps them in the next room." And with an abrupt change of subject she asked: "Is the Duchess of Breakwater very charitable?" And Blair quickly replied:

"Anyhow she wants you to stop for her at a musicale in Park Lane when you're fit."

Miss Lane gave a soft little giggle. "Is that what you call being charitable?"

Dan blushed crimson and exclaimed: "Well, hardly!"

"Did you come here to ask me that?"

"I came to tell you about our mutual friend. You'll let me call them that, won't you, because I happen to be in your dressing-room when they struck their vein?"

Miss Lane had drawn herself up to the corner of the sofa, and sat with her hands clasped around her knees, all swathed around and draped by the knitted shawl, her golden head like a radiant flower, appearing from a bank of snow. Her fragility, her sweetness, her smallness, appealed strongly to the big young fellow, whose heart was warm toward the world, whose ideals were high, and who had the chivalrous longing inherent in all good men to succor, to protect, and above all to adore. No feeling in Dan Blair had been as strong as this, to take her in his arms, to lift her up and carry her away from London and the people who applauded her, from the people that criticized her, and from Poniatowsky.

He was engaged to the Duchess of Breakwater. And as far as his being able to do anything for Letty Lane he could only offer her this politeness from the woman he was going to marry.

"I never sing out of the theater!" Her profile was to him and she looked steadily across the room. "It's a perfect fight to get the manager to consent."

Blair interrupted and said: "Oh, I'll see him, I'll make it all right."

"Please don't," she said bravely. "It's purely a business affair. How much will she pay?"

And the girl said passionately: "I wish to God I spoke it right through it! I wish I had never changed my speech or anything in him that was like home."

"Will two thousand dollars be too much to ask?" she said gently.

If she had said two million to the young fellow who had not yet begun to spend his fortune, which as far as he was concerned was nothing but a name, it would not have been too much to him, not too much to have given to this small white creature with her lovely flushed face, and her glorious hair.

"Whatever is your price, Miss Lane, 2000?"

"I'll sing three songs: one from Mandalay, an English ballad and something or other. I don't know what now, and I expect you don't realize how cheaply you are getting them." She laughed, and began to hum a familiar air.

"I wish you would sing just one song for me."

"For another thousand?" she asked, lifting her eyebrows. "What song is it?"

And as Dan hesitated, as if unwilling to give her words that were so full of appeal to him, she said defiantly: "Why, can you see a London drawing room listening to me sing Pansy's hymn tune?" Without lifting her head from the pillow she began in a charming undertone, her gray eyes fixed on his.

"From Greenland's icy mountains, From India's coral strands Where Africa's sunny fountains Roll down their golden sands"

Blair, near her, turned pale. There rose in him the same feeling that she had stirred years ago in the little church, and at the same time others. He had lost his father since then, and he thought of him now, but that big and emotion was not the one that swayed him.

"Lenny Lane, unconscious of how subtly she was playing, laughed, and suddenly remembered that Dan had sat before her that day by the side of old Blair. He asked abruptly:

"Why does the Duchess of Breakwater want me to sing?"

"Because she's crazy about your voice."

"Is she awfully rich?"

"Um . . . I don't know."

Letty Lane flashed a look at him. "Oh, she's rich!" she said. "I guess she won't pay the price then."

Dan said: "Yes, she will; yes, she will, all right."

"Now," Letty Lane went on, "is it a charity affair, I could sing for nothing, and I don't doubt the duchess."

OURAY—A fat, inscrutable-faced Ute Indian—loudly proclaimed himself The Friend of the White Man. Certain white men living near his reservation proclaimed quite as loudly that the chief was a most unmitigated old scoundrel. Others held that he was one of those somewhat rare specimens, a "good Indian." Here is his history, woven with the tale of an Indian uprising that brought his people into tragic prominence about thirty years ago.

The branches of the Ute "nation" were scattered over large sections of Utah, Colorado and other states. They were more or less at peace with the white settlers. Ouray, who was rather well educated, had gone several times to Washington to urge his tribesmen's rights. Nathan C. Meeker, the local Indian agent, managed to dispense justice on the reservation and was thought to have won his red ward's love and absolute trust.

Colorado was becoming more and more thickly populated by white men. Land that had once been practically free to all comers began to take on a much higher value. Settlers grumbled that the Ute reservation was too large and that so much good ground would be in better use if parcelled out among white men than under native ownership. Meeker saw that the reservation must soon or late be cut down. He was said to have talked the matter over with Ouray and, with the chief's approval, to have suggested a plan for leasing the entire reservation to the Ute. Hunting needs far more territory than does farm work. So Meeker suggested that the Indians under his care turn their minds to agriculture. He even went so far as to supply them with ploughs, etc., and to order them to till the soil.

The Utes (whether inspired by Ouray, or, as he claimed, against his advice) flatly refused. They said they were hunters, like their ancestors, not men farmers. They rebelled against the agent's authority. Daily the situation grew worse. At last, in July of 1889, Meeker told the Indian department at Washington that an outbreak seemed imminent. He asked that soldiers be sent to overawe the savages.

Accordingly, two months later a force under Major Thornburgh came to look into the state of affairs. Every effort was made to keep the coming of the soldiers a profound secret. But in the mysterious fashion known only to Indians the news was flashed from one end of the reservation to the other. Added to the original facts was a wild rumor that the troops were going to exploit the Utes from their old hunting grounds. Like wildfire the tidings—false and true alike—spread from village to village. The tribes began to arm. A large band of Ute braves fell upon the advancing soldiers at Milk River, near the reservation's northernmost boundary. Thornburgh and thirteen of his troops were killed and the horses of the entire command were captured. The rest of the soldiers defended themselves as best they could behind throwings that had been hastily thrown up.

And here, for days, they were besieged by the furious savages. On the same day that Thornburgh was killed a party of Utes swarmed down upon the local agency buildings. Meeker was killed, as was every man in his employ. The white women and children of the agency were captured, and were later released unharmed.

Meantime General Merritt and a strong force of regulars hurried to the rescue of the besieged survivors of Thornburgh's command. Ouray sent word to all concerned that the whole uprising had taken place without his knowledge. He claimed that at first news of the revolt had been given him and that he had thrown himself heart and soul into the task of making his Indians do not usually embark on a campaign without sanction or knowledge of their chief. But Ouray only reiterated his old-time slogan that he was "The White Man's Friend," and rushed off to meet General Merritt.

Ouray's Triumph.

He filled the air with protestations of his good will toward everybody in the country. Merritt, in particular, he assured the officers that Meeker's slayers should be given up to justice, and made glittering promises for his tribe's future good behavior. The upshot of the matter was that Ouray's fervent pledges and declarations won the day. It was a wondrous triumph for him. He had saved his people from heavy punishment. For public feeling against the Utes ran high, and many a Colorado white man just then would have asked nothing better than to have made war on them.

But Ouray's diplomacy carried all before it. The murderers of Meeker and the assailants of Thornburgh's force escaped unpunished. The wild old chieftain lived only a few months after scoring his diplomatic victory. He died on Los Pinos Agency, Colorado, August 27, 1890 in his sixtieth year. Old Coloradans still argue hotly as to whether he was a blackguard or a hero.

PLANNING WORK FOR MODEL ROADS

Pennsylvania to Lead in Highway Construction.

CONTRACTS UNDER NEW LAW

Modern System of Improving Thoroughfares—Purpose of Proposed Bond Issue—Support of Tender Administration.

The State Highway Department is planning for Pennsylvania the best system of improved roads in this country. An official of that department predicted recently that when the work it has projected shall have been completed the roads of the Keystone State would be unsurpassed by the famous highways of France, Germany and other European countries. Model roads for Pennsylvania have been made possible by the enactment by the legislature at its recent session of the measure popularly known as the "Sprout road bill." This legislation received the earnest support of Governor John K. Tener, who during the campaign of last year in public addresses repeatedly emphasized the fact that he was an enthusiastic good roads advocate and that the influence of his administration would be exerted for the advancement of the good roads movement. Since its inception the good roads movement in this state has been under Republican legislation.

The State Highway Department was established during the administration of Governor Samuel W. Pennypacker, and the act under which it was organized is the most liberal of all highway acts where the state assists in paying a portion of the cost of reconstructing roads. Under this law $500,000 was appropriated and expended for reconstruction work from June 1, 1903, to May 31, 1911. During that period 350 miles of road were reconstructed. Ten per cent of the amount appropriated was set aside as a maintenance fund and apportioned to the several townships and counties according to the number of miles of improved roads therein, which had been maintained to conform to the state standard. Under this law the state paid seventy-five per cent of the cost of reconstruction; the township and county each paying one-eighth of the total cost of improvement. The maintenance of these roads after construction was placed in the hands of the township supervisors.

Improvements Under Sprout Law.

The great demand for a system of connected improved highways and for a system of maintenance of the roads already reconstructed and of those reconstructed and improved in the future and its consummation in the enactment of the Sprout bill. This act reorganized the State Highway Department. It provides for two systems of road improvement, one designated as "State Highways," is comprised of about 8000 miles of public roads and turnpikes as described in 236 routes. These roads are the principal main thoroughfares or highways, forming and being main travelled roads or routes between the county seats of the several counties of the commonwealth, and to the state line and between principal cities, boroughs and towns. They will be marked, built or repaired and maintained by and at the sole expense of the state and they will be under the exclusive authority and jurisdiction of the State Highway Department. Surveys of each route must be made and a map showing all details must be prepared. The several routes shall be taken over by the department on or before June 1, 1912, except that portion of a route which traverses a township road upon which tolls are collected.

The taking over of the toll roads will be deferred until the money from the proposed bond issue becomes available. The bonds cannot be issued until the resolution amending section four of article nine of the state constitution is adopted at the next session of the legislature and after the several routes have been taken over by the department on or before June 1, 1912, except that portion of a route which traverses a township road upon which tolls are collected.

Games Played.
Johnstown at Uniontown.
Washington at Charleroi.

The Cokers had little trouble winning from Washington Saturday night by a score of 43 to 29. It was the first time in two years that the Cokers have won a game with Billy Kummer out of it. Dark and White played forwards. White made five field goals but neither he nor Dark did anything remarkable from the free line.

The game was really won by forwards as Washington had but four men on the floor. Egolf was loaned for the evening and played a clever game under the name of "Lee." Barum, who jumped center, started for the Georges. He will be remembered by Connellsville fans as the clever youngster who jumped center for Hans Wagner's team last year. All the Cokers performed well and brought home the bacon without working up a sweat. The lineup: Connellsville—13. Washington—29.
Dark right guard Ferrat
White left forward Kunkle
Cavanaugh center Barum
Reyes right guard "Lee"
Doherty left guard Snyder
Field goals—White 6, Reyes 4, Cavanaugh 3, Dark 3, Doherty 3, Fer-rat 2, Barum 2, Kunkle 2, "Lee" 2.
Foul goals—Dark—5 out of 11;
White, 2 out of 3; Snyder, 2 out of 12; Ferrat missed 4.
Referred—Wellard.

Basketball Notes.
Pittsburgh papers say the team owners are disappointed because President Joe Lethead hasn't made his "swing around the circle." Why?

Bill Herron has been released to Charleroi. They need him there Ferrat has made one field goal in 12 games. Herron can beat that. He does land a long shot once in a while.

Here's hoping Dutch Wolfhard kick a million points. The Jawas play in Uniontown.

The secret of Uniontown's success is close guarding. The team looks like also-rans in the scoring column, but notice the other quints. They worse. The Cokers made the only bid in the scutcheon, even if it isn't a very black one.

The fact remains, knotholes in the floor notwithstanding, the Herald man did slide out the unused side door.
The matron he is open it for him, he was so flustered.

The Cokers are now down to the limit of seven men they intend to carry during the season. Incidentally, these seven look mighty good.

Hand it to Kinkadee. He was in the midst of a warm rough and tumble here Friday night but had time to flash the kids at the scoring table as Ferrat's necklanchantly tossed a foul. Kinkadee has an icicle faded for coolness.

Easy schedule this week—only three games. About time the soft spots were hitting it the Coker Center. It ought to be three straight, too.

The news of Herron's release first became known through the Pittsburgh papers. Looks like a bit of petty spite on the part of the management because the local scribbles failed to go into epigrams of enthusiasm when Bill was signed. Fine business.

Looks like the beginning of the end at Washington with Ferrat and Mayham drawing their walking papers. Understand Manager Davis will play a semi-pro team. The league will probably stand for it anything goes with Lethead et al.

A BAD COLD IS EASILY BROKEN

The Most Severe Cold and Grippe Misery Will Be Relieved in Just a Few Hours.

There is not one grade of quinine in Pape's Cold Compound, which when taken every two hours, until three consecutive doses are taken, will surely end the gripe and break up the most severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach or limbs.
It promptly relieves the most miserable headache, dizziness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, cathedral affections, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars, and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

Take this harmless Compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine made anywhere else in the world which will cure your cold or grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

The Children's Luncheon.
Mothers living far from the schoolhouse for the children to come home to lunch will find this a solution of the cold lunch problem: Use a box about fifteen inches square, inside measurement; pack a three inch layer of excelsior very solidly in the bottom, then put a tin or metal pan having a very tight cover on this. Pack excelsior solidly around this to the top of the pan. It is very important to have it solid, as the pan must be taken out.
A cover must be made to fit the box, and this, too, covered for three inches or enough to reach the pan with the excelsior, held in place with cheesecloth or other light fabric tacked securely over it. For the box make a cover of linen or dark canvas. This cover should extend all over box and hook on side. For the lunch hold in the pan rice, beans, soup or whatever you may choose that can be boiled.
When nearly done cover closely and put at once in the box, put the cover on the box and it is ready and will be done and hot when the children are ready for it hours later. Of course if a tin pan is used nothing containing tomatoes should be chosen. This will be found of especial convenience to mothers living in the country, where children drive to school.

Milady's Mirror

Notes For the Nursery.
Baby should not be set on his feet too soon. When he feels like it he will start walking as naturally as any other little animal does.

Pace at any price is the motto of the mother who resorts to the baby
"comforter." None the less, to suck one of these comforts is a bad habit difficult to break, and it is as unhygienic as it is objectionable.

Baby is much happier left in peace to kick and cry in his cot than it is continually being dandled, and the constant nursing some mothers give is merely gratifying to their own sense of possession and not comforting to the child.

Opinion does not agree with every child, and when it comes heat its use should at once be discontinued.

A Hint to Mothers.
Children of nervous temperaments often become chilled and fretful during a bath. Try bathing the child first to the elbows and waist line, then drying quickly with a small Turkish towel. Let the child sit in the water during this part of the bath, so that the lower part of the body may be kept warm. This keeps away chill, and the bath can be finished in a moment, the child remaining warm and comfortable during the entire process. The practice can even be adopted with excellent results by grownups whose circulation is a trifle sluggish and who experience the unpleasant after bath chill.

Do You Know—Content is not the result of getting what you desire; it is realizing that you never will get it and giving up worrying.

It is a lack of a proper sense of humor that inspires even on the most representable man to believe that they are good people to give advice.

Many a girl thinks that a man is in love with her when he has merely decided that he wants a home of his own in which he can be as disagreeable as he pleases.

Excuse you deprecate the vanity of others is not absolute proof that you can't swallow a good dose of satery yourself.

Instead of worrying about how to manage a husband, the wise woman keeps him busy managing her.

The man who can feel downcast about the state of the country isn't the one who bothers much about the welfare of his own family, and vice versa.

Christmas Furs At Their Best

Variety—first of all, styles in all the sizes that the fur looks best in. This applies to sets as well as to fur coats.

Quality—chosen by experts who know furs from the pelt to the article ready for selling.

Price—lower because our bigger business (we sell from two stores) gives us the buying advantage of manufacturing furriers. Thus you see it is easier, better and perfectly reasonable for women to buy furs here.

Children Are Making Wonderful Discoveries in the Great Big Toy World

"Daddy, just look!" "Ow goody, isn't it wonderful?"—Little squeals of joy arise from one part and another all over the place, announcing that some youngster has discovered the thing he wanted the most.

Wonderful mechanical toys, hundreds and hundreds of dolls. A whole menagerie of animals, sleds and carts and velocipedes, furniture sets for big girls, furniture sets for the dolls. Houses and stores and stations, drums and bells and whistles; games for young and old, and that's not half—you come!

Yes, Little Blossom! There is a really, truly Santa Claus. No one must ever shake your faith in that fact. The man you see dressed up as Santa Claus on the streets, in the stores, at your Sunday school treat—are representatives or emblems as our flag is the emblem of our country. There may be several million American flags, but they stand for the one great nation.
There may be a thousand men representing Santa Claus but there is just one Santa Claus. A German child, an Italian child, a Russian child and you have all the same Santa Claus—and Santa Claus is love.

Love is the greatest thing in the whole world. Whoever is even playing Santa Claus is doing something to make others happy—he wouldn't be a Santa Claus who acted selfish or who jumped at the little folks and scared them with a "booi!" Helpfulness, making other people happy, driving out selfishness, giving for the joy of giving, these are all traits of love; of the really truly Santa Claus.

Santa Claus would willingly come down a sooty chimney if necessary; he can't be kept out, even out of houses with steam radiators and stinky flues, for love knows no barriers and stops for nothing in the anxiety to make happy the ones dear to him.

No Santa Claus. As well try to imagine a world without light and flowers without color or perfume. Santa Claus is the realiest thing on earth.

And Now is the Time When the Wright-Metzler Stock of Gold, Silver and Brass Wares is Richest in Gift Pieces

Gift-giving is settling down upon a rational basis and people of superior understanding mostly give things of service. Why a token of friendship should not be above all serviceable, is something not easy to comprehend, especially since service is one of the animating principles of the age.

This Wright-Metzler gift service of gold, silver and brass wares is built upon a basis of service, priced upon a basis of economy and warranted upon a basis of honor.
